

under 35 U.S.C. § 112 are no longer asserted.

On November 18, 2004 Examiner Stewart and the undersigned conducted a telephonic interview. Claims 7 and 9 were the only claims discussed. The Molino and Fogg patents were the only references discussed. The rejection of claims 7 and 9 was discussed. We also discussed the application.

The Examiner said that he would withdraw the rejection of claim 7 based on Molino because of the filing dates to which Applicant is entitled.

Fogg was discussed with respect to claims 7 and 9. Fogg is an artificial foot designed to enable the wearer to walk in a relatively normal manner.

Regarding claim 7, it was pointed out that Fogg does not provide structure for adjustment of the foot element to a set position such that, in an adjusted position, the foot is at a fixed angle relative to the leg element. Applicant's piston 17 and ring 18 structure provide this foot-positioning capability. And, Fogg does not provide structure for limiting pivoting movement of the foot relative to the leg prosthesis in the adjusted position during walking. Applicant's position-adjustable resilient element 14 limits movement of the adjusted foot element.

Regarding claim 9, it was noted that Fogg lacked at least the cylinder and position-adjustable resilient positionable within the cylinder as claimed.

It is believed that agreement was reached that the rejections of claims 7 and 9 based on Fogg and the rejection of claim 7 based on Molino should be withdrawn.
